Projector buying tips - how to get the most out of your purchase

Projectors have fast become the centrepiece of classroom technology hubs that directly engage students and add impact to each lesson. Thus, the need to make sure you purchase the right projector for your classroom is a decision of significant importance.

Below are a few tips to consider;

Brightness:

The brighter the projector the more capable the unit is when dealing with the presence of ambient light and/or producing a larger projected image. Keep in mind that brightness is NOT the only factor in determining picture quality. Other factors such as resolution and contrast ratio play a big part also. In general projectors that are rated more than 2000 ANSI lumens are recommended. Care should also be taken prior to purchase and installation, as not all brightness levels are reported equally by manufacturers.

Resolution:

Resolution is simply the number of pixels the projector uses to create the image. The more pixels it uses, the higher the resolution. SVGA and XGA are terms that describe common resolutions used by computers and projectors. All modern computers run XGA resolution or higher, thus making XGA the minimum resolution these days. Generally, SVGA is only really suited to video. Keep in mind that one of the key factors in choosing the right resolution is your typical application. For most classrooms the primary use for a projector is PowerPoint presentations, pie charts, graphs and excel spreadsheets, therefore XGA resolution projectors are perfect for this kind of work.

Sound:

Sound is generally a secondary issue for many projectors and their built in speakers can be poor. Installing a projector into a classroom without additional sound support can limit the use and function of the room. E.g. video or DVD sound may be difficult to hear and can frustrate students and teachers alike. A range of solutions exist to ensure that sound reproduction is clear and enjoyable no matter what the presentation.

Weight:

If you are not looking for a portable solution - weight needn't be a factor. However, if the projector is likely to be moved around from room to room you will need a light projector. Anything less than 2.5kg is ideal for easy mobility by either staff or students.

Power Activation:

For the most part, projectors require a cool down period. Most modern units (and all in the Epson range) can have direct shutdown capabilities from power points. This is especially good in portable situations as users often don't have time to wait. Even in more permanent and installed situations this can work to protect against power outages.
