Rear Projection Benefits - An Innovative Approach to Screen Projection

By Jade Leopoldo

The purpose of a projection screen is to reproduce visual information without losing image quality and to distribute the projected light towards your audience. For most purposes, a front projection screen is the obvious choice. However rear projection screens have a multitude of advantages (below) that should be considered also.

Rear projection eliminates the need to be in a darkened room

Rear projection permits the use of visuals in near normal room lighting, allowing the audience to take notes and the speaker to maintain eye contact with audience members. No matter what your lighting levels, the effects of ambient light will be reduced, producing images of better contrast.

Light dissipation is minimised as the distance between the light source and the screen is greatly shortened. This gives a brilliant picture and requires little darkening of the room. Projection can take place in full daylight which is ideal as it is hardly appropriate for teaching and learning in total darkness. Note taking is permissible as there is always enough natural or artificial light.

Excellent Image Quality

Rear projection can provide up to 4x brighter images than front projection. It means that the projector is located behind the screen and shooting images toward the audience. It features uniform graphic density ultra-high contrast and high image resolution to offer viewers excellent visual quality in high light environments. In addition rear projection enables an image to be visible from both sides of the screen itself.

No shadows caused by presenters

Presenters are able to walk or stand in front of a rear projection screen without casting shadows over the image. Rear projection is the closest you will get to a giant TV screen feeling!

Hidden projection equipment

The noise and distraction of equipment is largely eliminated by moving it behind the screen or even into a separate room in some cases. With the projector placed behind the screen the viewing area is left quite, clean, tidy and less cluttered.

For more information on screen options and the types of rear projection screens available contact a D.I.B Solutions Consultant today on (03) 9457 4800.
